FABRICATION & PRODUCTION TECHNOLOGY MANUFACTURING

This cluster includes establishments involved in fabricating metals and metal components, as well as developing and manufacturing industrial or heavy machinery.

Northern Colorado excels in producing agricultural and construction machinery, industrial robots, turbines and generators, mold-making, and component fabrication. This specialization highlights the region's strengths in both traditional and advanced manufacturing.

- The Gross Regional Product reported in 2023 was over $670 million.
- Within the region, there are particularly strong linkages to agricultural production, inputs, & services; food processing & manufacturing; and plastics.
- The Agricultural and Construction Machinery and Components subcluster has a location quotient of 5.50.
- The NOCO Manufacturing Partnership works with Northern Colorado manufacturers to expand and support this cluster.

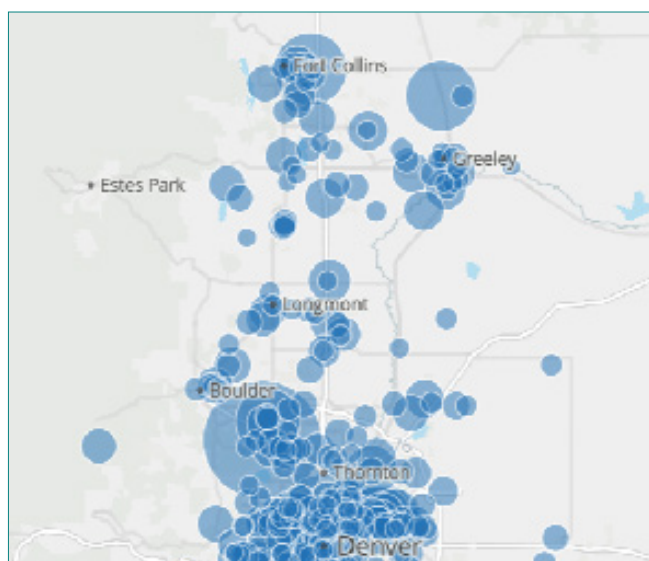

“We have a large customer for components that are meant to go to space and that industry has just been absolutely booming, both here in Colorado and in the United States as a whole. This concept of private space travel, sending satellites to space, sending all sorts of things to space has really been expanding. We've found ways that additive manufacturing can better address that particular market.”
